I need to make a view that lies outside the application's frame but below all other screens. This view should be visible only when the application starts and when the user clicks a button. How can I do this? Should I use a UIActivityIndicatorView or something else? What's the best way to do this? A: In iOS 5, you can set the "rootViewController" property of your UIApplication like this:

UIApplication.sharedApplication.setStatusBarHidden(true, withAnimation:.Fade)
```

UIApplication.sharedApplication.setStatusBarHidden(false, withAnimation:.Fade)
```

UIApplication.sharedApplication.setStatusBarHidden(true) UIApplication.sharedApplication.setStatusBarHidden(false)
UIApplication.sharedApplication.statusBarHidden = false UIApplication.sharedApplication.statusBarHidden = true So, you can put your UIViewController in the "rootViewController", which will make the statusBar hidden for your entire app. if( SLComposeViewController.isAvailableForServiceType(SLServiceTypeEmail) ) { SLComposeViewController *svc =
[SLComposeViewController composeViewControllerForServiceType:SLServiceTypeEmail]; svc.completionHandler =
^(SLComposeViewControllerResult result) { if( result == SLComposeViewControllerResultCancelled ) { NSLog(@"Sorry, hit Cancel"); } }
