How to run the application: You can access KeyMACRO through the Windows Start menu by simply searching for the app. Once launched, KeyMACRO will require some configuration. KeyMACRO has been designed to work well in modern operating systems, including Windows XP. It should be noted that KeyMACRO does not run in Windows Vista and Windows 7. This application does not require the installation of any add-on or extension to the browser, so you don't need to configure a specific browser. When configured, KeyMACRO will allow you to launch a series of commands through keystrokes or mouse clicks. These commands will be as if you had typed them directly on the keyboard or performed a mouse click. Powersave program is a small and very easy to use utility that can help you reduce the amount of battery consumed when your computer is not in use. On Windows 7, users are often tempted to unplug their laptop from their power source, to save some battery. While this option is great, the truth is that, depending on your computer and application running, this can lead to a significant drop in your battery life. Why is this so? Well, when your computer is off, none of its programs are running, which implies a decrease in system load. But, the biggest issue is that all of your programs are running in the background. Powersave does not disable your programs, instead, it simply makes them run when your computer is off. It only takes a few minutes to install, and then you will never have to think about turning off your computer when it's not in use. Powersave offers three modes, as follows: 1. Off – In this mode, no applications are running. Even when your computer is on, all the hardware components are powered down. 2. Minimize – In this mode, only the windows you specified are running. For instance, you can define the minimum power you want to save. 3. After being off – When your computer is turned off, your applications are shut down. Once the computer has been on for a while, it automatically starts your applications when you turn it back on. Powersave is configured via the Options menu. You can select the application to be shut down as soon as you switch off your computer. You can choose whether your application should be immediately started or whether it should be started at the next boot. You can also set a timer to start your applications, as well as a delay before starting them. When your computer is switched on, you will immediately see a list of your programs. You can then click
