Folk & Indigeneous Presents: Jalopy Welcome to another delightfully funky audio release from folk and indigenous musician Jalopy, a good friend of ours and the man behind this week's release. For those not familiar with him, Jalopy is a Vancouver (BC) based singer/songwriter who's been writing and performing since 2006, playing at local bars, folk venues, local arts centers, and festivals around the Lower Mainland. His music has also appeared in over a dozen TV shows and movies, including some really big ones like Terriers. Jalopy is often credited as a songwriter as he usually writes the songs, but he's got just the right mix of composing and performing that makes him stand out. Jalopy is up for the challenge. He also likes the challenge of trying out new styles and sounds in his music. So, this latest release is a bit of hybrid between R&B, a track similar to "Jammin" by Chaka Khan, and a big pop chorus. "Les Chemins I'm Wearing Out" is the title track to Jalopy's debut EP and you're invited to listen via the embedded player below. You can buy Jalopy's EP from CD Baby (link) and also from iTunes. Once again, I've embedded the Jalopy - "Les Chemins I'm Wearing Out" video, below, as well as his website. Enjoy... Jalopy Thank you Eds for the enthusiastic new release. But I am into Jalopy as a person. For me, his songs are just so intelligent, friendly, cheeky and tuneful. His stories have great depth. We are in the process of building a jalopy. Get it. That is great. More Jalopy will certainly bring more jalopy. So, Jalopy must be updated time to time. P.S. and we really like that "Les Chemins I'm Wearing Out" is a pop hit. But, it will have to stay there. That is Jalopy's music. That is Jalopy. It is Jalopy music. Anna Lou, thank you so much for the kind words!! Really appreciate it, yeah for sure. I love Jalopy's music too. I got to meet him last summer at an
