However, this does not mean that you cannot use Photoshop Elements and Photoshop at the same time. If you need a new or more powerful feature, it is easy to switch between using Photoshop and Photoshop Elements. Although you can open two Photoshop versions in the same time, it is a bad idea to use two different versions of Photoshop to create, edit, modify, or retouch images. Most of Photoshop's features are built into the software but Photoshop Elements lacks some features, such as a selection tool, blur, and a stroke and fill tool. Most common editing and retouching tools are available in both programs. The only thing that is not available in Adobe Photoshop Elements is the Cropping tool that can be used to adjust the size

Transmitters in various applications such as telephone systems, cable TV systems and military systems are frequently provided with a power source which may be of the type described as a battery. However, the drain on the battery may be substantial. Some instances may result in a single instance of a call. While other instances may result in a continuous stream of voice traffic for a period of time. Regardless of the particular application, the drain of the power source can be substantial. Further, in military applications the potential exists that the battery may be drained even during standby conditions. Many battery-driven applications which require only a small amount of energy are intermittently active. However, some applications such as those described above require more energy than can be provided by a battery having a short life. For such applications, a means is needed to replace the battery in a manner which minimizes the number of person-hours to be spent servicing the application. In certain applications, such as military or space applications, the cost of human labor is a significant factor. Further, in applications where humans are not available the means and costs for replacing a battery must be reduced. While various backup power sources such as diesel, AC or other types of generator systems may be utilized, such a utilization may involve considerable cost. In addition, the requirements for some backup power sources are not always compatible with the requirements of certain applications such as telephone systems and cable TV systems. In certain cases, such as in military applications where the communications system is likely to be subject to an attack, the availability of backup power sources such as diesel generators or AC power supplies may be limited. In those cases, the availability of a battery as a backup power source is less likely to be a problem. For some applications a power source which is not easily accessible may be utilized. For example, in a telephone system a power source which may be external to the telephone exchange system such as an AC power supply or power line may be utilized. While these types of power sources do not require human service, they may involve a substantial cost. For some applications, only a battery source which requires human service is acceptable. However, in many cases a battery source such as a battery may be improved. For example, batteries typically have a very short life and must be periodically replaced. Further, batteries often discharge rapidly during use such that the battery is used to its maximum capacity in a matter of a few hours to a few days. In those cases where a battery is utilized as the power source for a transmitter, the battery is not

Q: How to make specific number variables in javascript? I am a beginner to javascript. I have a div that I want to increment each time a button is pressed. So if the number is already 1, I want to increment that number by a certain amount. I want it to show the number of increment like this: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5,.... This is the code for my function for the button: And this is the code for my function for the incrementing of the number: `function play() { var num = parseInt(document.getElementById("num").value, 10); var num_increment = parseInt(5, 10); var num_plus = parseInt(num_increment, 10); document.getElementById("num").value = num + num_plus; }` A: First off, you're not setting the number to 1, you're setting it to `parseInt('1', 10)`. The second issue is that you're calling `parseInt` on the value attribute itself. You'd want to get the value of the input. Instead of `parseInt(document.getElementById("num").value, 10)` you should just be `var num = parseInt(document.getElementById("num").value);` which is the same as `parseInt(document.getElementById("num").value, 10)`. Second, you're not actually assigning it to anything. You need to do something like `var num = 1;` This assigns `num` the number 1. Then you increment `num`, which should end up equal to `num += 5;` which will add 5 to `num`. This should get you up and running. There's still some problems with code quality, like naming your functions properly, but I'll leave that to you :) `function play() { var num = parseInt(document.getElementById("num`
