Run the setup.exe file- [Instructor] This video is about cell biology, and how the cytoplasm and nucleus work together to create a living cell. So if we were to see this cell like a car, the cell has all of the parts needed for a car on the inside, for example, the car would have its power plant in the engine. Here's the engine in cell. Here's the fuel that powers the engine in the mitochondria. In the living cell, you have the engine and the fuel. In the living cell, you have the engine and fuel. In the living cell, you have the engine and fuel. In this living cell, you have the engine and fuel. The engine is the nucleus. So it's the living cell's power plant. The engine is the nucleus. The vehicle is cytoplasm. It's the living cell's power plant and fuel. The fuel to run the car is the mitochondria, and mitochondria make energy for the living cell. So here's the engine, and fuel is the mitochondria. The engine is the nucleus. The vehicle is the cytoplasm. Let's go back over to our car for a second. The car is in the garage, and it needs to have some juice to actually start rolling out the door. That's actually the engine powering up. So you're going to need an electric current to make the engine go. Here's the car sitting in the garage. Let's step back over to our living cell in the kitchen. In
