By Emma Jane Kirby, Import News 16/07/2016 | 12:00AM BST When it comes to exporting cheese the UK's position in the international food and drink market is less enviable than you might think. The country is traditionally a major exporter of lamb and pork, both of which have suffered from the drop in sterling over the past few years. At the same time, the UK has one of the world's best-selling exports, with French cheese ranked second only to the US. French cheese is primarily made in the Auvergne and Brie regions of the country, making it a key export for the country's agriculture and food industry. In 2014, the UK exported £570m ($
