ProChaper Software Company, Inc.Osteomyelitis following a gunshot wound: a retrospective analysis of 3 years at an Australian trauma centre. Gunshot wounds are the most common cause of trauma to the distal extremities and lead to greater than 50% amputations. Osteomyelitis is a common sequela of these wounds and results in pain and morbidity for these patients. We retrospectively reviewed all patients with osteomyelitis following a distal gunshot wound treated at our Level I trauma centre over a 3-year period. Four patients (6% of all gunshot wounds) were found to have osteomyelitis following treatment. All 4 patients were male. Two of these patients had chronic osteomyelitis due to an osteoporotic fracture; however, 2 patients had gunshot wounds to the knee with delayed diagnosis of osteomyelitis. All patients were treated with 2-stage revision arthroplasty and 2-stage revision arthroplasty. This study suggests that, as there are no differences in the incidence of osteomyelitis between patients with osteoporotic fractures and those with non-osteoporotic fractures, the indications for treatment of osteomyelitis can be divided into those with osteoporosis with symptoms of fracture or non-osteoporotic with symptoms of pain, stiffness, effusions and instability. We have also shown that the incidence of osteomyelitis following a knee gunshot wound is high.Q: SAS GENERIC Statement Error in SAS base system I am trying to use the generic statement to create a table in SAS base. I am getting the following error. ERROR: Statement went to infinite compile time loop. ERROR: The statement compilation failed because: ERROR: GENERIC SECTION: ENTRY CODE = -1.
